Tussey Teaser #2 - Tussey-Whipples 11 Miler Revival Run

April 10, 2004

by Marty Mazur

The second Tussey Teaser run was a great success. About 20 runners showed up on a clear, brisk Spring morning. Included in the group were Eric Tien, Scott Smith, Tim Brenza, Dan Guss, Erin Wyble, Susan Gillmor, Steve Geyer, Jen and Joe Herbstritt, Steve Cohen, Diana Damer, Lisa Nancollas, and Marty Mazur, and maybe a few more that I lost track of. The group set out to do a revival of the Tussey to Whipples Dam 11 Miler, an old club race that fell by the wayside in the early 90s. A couple of college guys had a cab follow them to Whipples so they could park their car, then had the cab transport them to the Tussey start. Marty Klanchar and John Domico peeled off at Bear Gap Rd to run a closed 12 mile loop. They needed to get back to their cars to head off to another commitment. We couldn't have asked for a better day to run in the mountains.

The run wasn't so much a race as a training run for most who showed up. One or two people were polishing off their Boston Marathon training. Dan Guss was using the run to help him decide whether he can get in shape to run the God's Country Marathon in June (which is like using a weekend paintball tourney to help you decide whether to enlist to go to Iraq. I mean, Tussey-Whipple is a nice challenge, but not a 19 mile hill!). Some of the runners did the course in well under 80-minutes, but others took nearly 2 hours. One of the college guys took a frigid dip in the lake at Whipples after his run. Marty Mazur kept time with Dan, who is pretty sure now that June 5 is too soon to get ready for a soul-crushing run, even if it is in God's Country.
